STELLER'S SEA EAGLE

This species is threatened with extinction caused by regionally declining population as a result of habitat degradation, pollution, poisoning by lead shot, and over-fishing. It therefore qualifies as Vulnerable. The global population is estimated to number 4,600-5,100 individuals. Hokkaido, Japan is a very important area as wintering spot. The population in Hokkaido is 1,400-1,700.

WHITE TAILED EAGLE

The species are widely distributed in Europe and western Asia, eastern Asia. The global population is 20,300~39,600 individuals. The eagle normally come to Hokkaido for wintering spot same as Steller's sea eagles. But it is increasing the population of breeding in Hokkaido in recent years. Both eagles are an endangered species and they have been designated as Japanese special natural treasures.
